

ABSTRACT

- A method of detecting a fluorescent molecule in a test sample, the following steps:
- (a) a step of measuring in a time-dependent manner individual fluorescence intensities of a plurality of species of fluorescent molecules each having an inherent fluorescence lifetime;
 - 5 and (b) a step of comparing the measured fluorescence intensities.